Course Objectives and Content

This course provides an overview of the history of Rock (it is not exhaustive), which has undergone many stylistic and genre-related changes over the course of its lifetime. Our class will investigate the stylistic sounds as they evolve over time, thinking about recognizable instrumentation, performance techniques, and technology. We will also contextualize these styles within the cultural (political, social, musical) landscape surrounding their development. There are no prerequisites for this course.

Learning Objectives

1. Students will compare and contrast musical elements of stylistic periods within Rock’s development.
2. Students will perform basic analyses, recognizing elements like melody, timbre, instrumentation, and form.
3. Students will recognize the broader cultural trends that contribute to Rock’s evolution over time.

Course Requirements

- Students are required to complete the reading to the best of their ability.
- Students are expected to attend lecture and respect that time as an integral part of their learning process.

Required Texts: All required texts are available at the Bull’s Head Bookstore.
- John Covach and Andrew Flory. What’s that Sound?: An Introduction to Rock and its History (4th ed.)

Social Media/Technology Resources

UNC_RockHistory Twitter: This is a resource to submit questions about conceptual material during/after class time. The TAs for the course will be given time at the end of class to field questions and comments drawn from the Twitter account, so it is encouraged that you contribute. It is expected (and necessary) that the content stay on-topic and appropriate.

UNC_RockHistory Spotify Playlist: We have built a listening resource for students to access through Spotify. This contains all examples mentioned in the Kovach text, as well as those highlighted in class. It is expected that you will listen in order to hear the distinct sounds of each stylistic period within Rock’s history.

Honor Code

Academic integrity is important so that all can learn and work in an environment of mutual respect and trust. Students are expected to abide by the University's Honor Code. You can read the code at http://instrument.unc.edu. All written assignments are to be completed individually and be your own personal work. I do encourage you to study the course topics and discuss questions in groups. If you have questions about an assignment, please ask me.

Disability Accommodations

Accommodations are provided to students who are identified with Accessibility Resources and Service by providing documentation that supports the need for such so they may, as independently as possible, meet the demands of university life. If you require such accommodations, please visit https://accessibility.unc.edu/ at the beginning of the semester to secure accommodations. I am unable to accommodate those who do not have the proper documentation, but am more than willing to help in the acquisition of documentation. I am happy to help create an equal and fair learning environment for my students.
