Of A Bilingual Identity
CLOSEST: THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE WRITING

© Copyright
2009
Patrick Lluull

Preceding page, Reading Rhetoric: Interact. An Explanatory Desire
mind

and technology could be called "the internet"—when I entered the computer science class, I was struck by the difference. The teacher, the students, the materials, everything was different. I had never been in a class like this before. The teacher spoke in a way that was different from anything I had heard before. The students were engaged and eager to learn. The materials were challenging but interesting. I was excited to be part of this new experience. It was unlike anything I had ever experienced before. I felt like I was on the cutting to edge of something exciting and new. I was eager to learn and to see where this journey would take me. The experience was a powerful one, and I felt like I had come a long way in just a few weeks. I was determined to make the most of this opportunity.

The class continued, and I became more and more immersed in the material. I was fascinated by the possibilities of the internet and the ways in which it could change the world. The teacher was enthusiastic and passionate about the topic, and I found myself concentrating more on the material than I ever had in a class before. The students were also engaged, and we were all motivated to learn. The experience was transformative, and I felt like I had found a new passion in life.
wouldn't have if I weren't in command of two linguistic systems, one of English and another of my native Spanish. I can express myself in English and in Spanish as well. I have a wider range of vocabulary and a richer verbal repertoire in English, but my proficiency in Spanish is not as advanced. I can read and write in both languages, but I am more comfortable writing in English.

English is my first language, but Spanish is my second. I learned English at a young age, and I was immersed in it from birth. Spanish, on the other hand, was learned later in life. I have a stronger grasp of English grammar and vocabulary, but my proficiency in Spanish is not as advanced as my English. I can understand and speak Spanish fluently, but I struggle with certain aspects of the language, such as the nuances of grammar and spelling.

In my writing, I prefer to use English. It is my first language, and I am more comfortable writing in it. I feel more confident when I write in English, and I find it easier to express my thoughts and ideas. However, I am not as proficient in English as I am in Spanish, and I struggle with certain aspects of the language, such as the use of idioms and colloquial expressions.

In my everyday life, I use both languages. I speak Spanish at home with my family, and I use English at work and in public settings. I find it easier to communicate in English, but I also enjoy using Spanish in my personal life. I feel a sense of pride when I am able to express myself in both languages.
UNIT 3

Introduction to some other words that are "so, you're a writer, too?" when I'm with fellow writers of fellow writers of writing and in conversation. While this may be true, I'm not sure if this day and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day, and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day, and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day,
and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know, the power of the great things about poor past and writing is how our
past time, that is why is this day, and conversation are not. The time I think that is why is this day, and conversation, which means one has to face challenges, and know,