Moreover, the religion of the God we worship makes its strongest appeal to the burden of the world. “Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest,” has always been a most effective invitation to the black man. For who could possibly be more weary than he, who could possibly be more heavy laden, who could possibly enjoy rest more than he? To him this has always been a real invitation to a truly heavy-laden man. His religion has always been a real power that relieves real burdens. Christianity to him, has been more than religion, it has always been from the very first, an experience. The Spirit beareth witness with his spirit.¹

SELECTED CHORAL MUSIC SCORES

In Timothy Sharp’s article “Spirituals: America’s Original Contribution to World Sacred Music,” which was reprinted as Chapter 11 in So You Want to Sing Spirituals, Sharp surveyed four collections of concert spirituals written for choral forces that covered a wide range of composers and stylistic approaches.

In addition to those referenced in Sharp’s article, this appendix presents a selected list of choral music score compilations containing concert spirituals. The results are categorized by the following choral ensemble forces: (Mixed Voices, Women’s Voices, Men’s Voices, Children’s Voices, and Unison, Two-Part, Equal or Unspecified Voices). Only the spirituals contained in the compilations are listed.

NOTE: Contents from this section are indexed in both the SYWTSS Expanded Index and the Song Index. Once this appendix is “completed,” newer entries to this section will thereafter appear at the end of the appendix.
